Nightingale Song

Toad The Wet Sprocket

We sing the nightingale song alive
Streets never border further than my sight
We sing the nightingale song alive
We might be different but our hearts won't lieAnd little ever changes if anything at all
But the song rings loudly through these hallsWe sing the nightingale song alive
We might be different but our hearts won't lieAnd little ever changes when you view it from the sky
And the damage we encounter the earth just passes by
And little ever changes if anything at all
And we remind ourselves how small we are
