Magazines

Duncan Sheik

You see them everywhere, you know those magazines Yeah I've bought a few, they show you everything So many news stands, well as I'm passing by Rows and rows of you bound to catch my eyeNow everyone can gaze upon your body It's good for you, I guess you have no shame I never knew if how I acted would make you seek revengeNow I know, you're in magazinesBut is it really you in the empty world? I shouldn't be surprised, you're an ambitious girl With all that naked skin as sweet as honey Maybe you just really needed money I wondered if I would be punished for my voyeuristic pleasureNow I know, you're in magazines Now I know, you're in magazines Now I knowI tear through pages of every kind of pose But it's not really you I see when I look real close You're a little bit different, you're a little bit different You're a little bit differentAnd now I know, you're in magazines Now I know, you're in magazines And I'm alone, you're in magazines It never was you, it never was you It never was you in magazines
