Voices

Ryan Adams

You come through the door like a bag of rocks
Wounded all the time
I'm inside the room with the TV on mute
Screaming, "Elijah, Elijah don't you come
Oh God, don't you come"I steal out the window like I'm using the door
Whispering willows outside
Turn into statues of you, fangs exposed, breathing fire
Elijah don't you come
Oh God, don't you comeLocate the coffin and procure the ring
I'll distract Gabriel, it's your destiny after all
Just go and don't you ever look back
Kiss me again and don't you listen to the voices in the past
They lied, oh they lied, they liedWhen you see the lights, don't you dare go in
Find your way back to the house
And the wind upon the gate when the gate swings back and forth
That's the sign that we are never coming back
Once the signal is being firedWhen you're in the room, I am under the bed
I am inside your soul
I cover your mouth and my hands are just as ice
Screaming, "Elijah, oh Elijah come down
Come and take your reward"Locate the coffin and procure the ring
I'll distract Gabriel, it's your destiny after all
Just go and don't you ever look back
Kiss me again and don't you listen to the voices in the past, they lied
Run away from the light, run away from the light, little ones, little ones
