Profanum Vulgus

Revocation

Obelisks of avarice, building towers of vanity
Shielded from consequence in opulent majestyI shall avert my gaze
From the profanum vulgaris
Shunning the needy and the lame
Those fit only to serve usCorpulent gluttons prepare for the feast
Ravenous hunger, the dine on the weakEgotist your avarice knows no bounds
Still you sit indignant on your throne of greed
Covetous hoarder of wealth, your lust for gold so obscene
Yet emptiness still fills you inside, the blight of the soulless kingVultures circling above the carrion
Corpses picked clean in a lightless dawnPredators of rapacity
Insatiable voracity
Manipulators expand the divide
Pitiful plebeians, the common herd I decry
