Metropolis

Wintersleep

A full-grown man, man casually dressed caught a thought in a plan in a busy metropolis four tarot cards held to tightly to his chestas if to protect as if his life depended on this way it works someone more adventuroussome other place some other place that I forget as if the world has ever stopped and noticed something so pure some comical, so tragicthese two little girls girls in rhythm more or less caught up in a twirl and miscellaneous but love is a call don't have to be invited a climb through walls as if never existedThe man that you are The man you were
The man you left Turn into stars flowing, through the wilderness Burning hard, a memory you cant forget Wherever you are, why'd you ever reveal itI know who you are I know the secretes you protect Alone in your car, the violence you imagine It hurts so hard, a memory you cant forget Wherever you are, why you ever concede it As if was regards ever care and if it did But nothing un-pure is ever complicated
But nothing is ever done, is ever done its said by chance But nothing I'm sure has ever resonated But .....
