Patty Melts

Candypants

The nicest boy in town says "Patty, hello" and she turns and walks away
She has some better thing to do
But when another boy comes strolling along and he's bitter and forlorn
Like an April snow, she's through
In his tortured eyes she sees a new way to give and help and please

And then Patty melts, 'cause he's the one
Patty melts and she's all gone

And will she lie?
And will she hide every tear that her easy heart can spill?
Oh yes- I've seen it all before
Watch him wring her like a damp little dish rag and wipe the floor
Until she doesn't want him anymore
So she falls down on his knees and he pours his pain like antifreeze

Patty melts away
But I hear her say, "Well love isn't always happy"
Can't she understand, on the other hand, it's not misery
In her tragic eyes she sees a new way to give and help and please
---
Lyrics submitted by kelly smith.

Lyrics provided by https://damnlyrics.com/