He Says She Says

Freezepop

he looks at her and feels the static she's trying not to catch his eye lots of words but little meaning all he gets when he asks why on the phone, the tension's building staring blankly at the floor apologies and accusations they've both been thru this before (they've both been thru this before)

he says "I miss the way you looked at me"
she says "I'm sorry but i don't agree"
he says "it's not the way this has to be"
she says "what happened to our symmetry"

she's gotten good at dodging questions and he's been covering his tracks like a train wreck in slow motion now it's too late to turn back they're so tired of pretending it?s the same thing ever day late at night they lie together but their minds are far away

he says "I miss the way you looked at me"
she says "I'm sorry but i don't agree"
he says "it's not the way this has to be"
she says "what happened to our symmetry"
(2x)

it's easy to lose sight of things they had it once, but now it's gone resentment builds up over time forget about who's right or wrong how did it ever come to this when did the line get crossed things just fell apart so fast and now their love is lost (and now their love is lost)

he says "I miss the way you looked at me"
she says "I'm sorry but i don't agree"

he says "it's not the way this has to be"
she says "what happened to our symmetry"
(2x)

what happened to our symmetry (2x)
