No Trigger

Exhaustion takes the wheel and separates situations into delusions
Rip apart the clouds and point fingers in my face
Shouting, "everything will stay the same until you change"
Dosed up and motivation-less todayToo tired to run, too sickly to stay
Cornered in a corner, it's a place called everydayThis autopilot life, sawed off after the first couple branches
Pity doesn't cut it, we can barley afford this
I cant afford your living wage
I can attempt to free this day and ageToo tired to run, too sickly to stay
Cornered in a corner, it's a place called everyday
