Putting the Past Right

Hot Cross

I will say this 9 out of 10 times when you trust yourself
the inevitable finds you back in the place you've been begging to avoid And when it all comes back to the identical conversations as insignificant as yesterday's you hope to realize that your first instinct is always the right one it's better to run from a death knell than to fight one
This is always true Ironic that the first to argue is always the one you're on about ironic that you're always the last to trust your own plans and even worse that you're unavoidably the object of your own guilt
