Nature Co.

Evan & Jaron

If nature sold herself on layaway with a little down
I would be the first in line to buy myself a sound
A waterfall, a tidal wave or a beating of the drums
A heavy wind, a thunder or a falling of the leavesAnd I would proclaim, I'm the new proprietor of a sound
In a press conference held downtown when the people would look at me
In this state I would simply tell them this
At least you'll have someone to blame for ruining your weekendI would play Mother Nature unease my sound at will
No more sitting and waiting on this quite window sill
If I feel like love I will shake the trees
If I'm consumed in loneliness then I will drop the leavesAnd I would proclaim, I'm the new proprietor of a sound
In a press conference held downtown when the people would look at me
In this state I would simply say outright
At least you have someone to blame for scaring the children in the nightWhat if I call for a waterfall some light rain
And some other owner calls for a massive hurricane We'd have to be responsible users and respect the rules of God
I'll just take a load off and have to buy them allAnd I would proclaim, I'm the new proprietor of a sound
In a press conference held downtown when the people would look at me
In this state I would, I would simply say
At least you have someone to blame for a near perfect dayI would proclaim, I'm the new proprietor of a sound
In a press conference held downtown when the people would look at me
In this state I would, I would simply say
At least you have someone to blame
