Elle G.

Newsboys

Thumbs out on a desert road
I am told, leads to nowhere
Any shade is as good as the next
If your shadow doesn't go thereWeek seven, did you really assume I'd find some solace from the letter in your room?
Next life, could you kindly refrain
From throwin' yourself at the mercy of a trainSilence all, nobody breathe
How in the world could you just leave?
You promised you would
Silence that evil with goodHear me out, I have the floor
I'll give you my tears, I'll listen more
You promised you would
Overcome evil with goodMaybe this world is a barren place
For a soul prone to get lost
But Heaven still hounds from the smallest sounds
To the cries of the storm-tossedWeek nine, I am writin' in the sand
Any little clue that could help me understand
Every whispered secret, every muffled sigh
Every half-truth that was added to a lieSilence all, nobody move
I've got to know, know what you hoped to prove
You promised you would
Silence that evil with goodShame feeds guilt, guilt needs release
You took it to God, you made your peace
And swore that you would
Overcome evil with goodEvery old demon playin' back the crime
If they needed blood, I'd have gladly given mine
A child of the kingdom, still an invalid
Forgive her, please Father she don't know what she didSilence all, now go to sleep
The water's free, the well is deep
How can we return
That which we never could earn?And God, I long to see her face
We haven't a hope beyond Your grace
I know that You will Overcome evil
For good

Lyrics provided by https://damnlyrics.com/