All Systems Down

Mimes On Rollercoasters

The soft orange glow in the western sky signals the end of the working day.
One by one the lights come on. Faceless zombies find their way home.

I take off my hat and hang up my coat then warm my hands by the fire.
Dinner smells especially good tonight. My wife greets me with her smile.
An old routine repeated millions of times. Tonight itâ€™s just not the same.
I donâ€™t really know whatâ€™s come over me. Maybe itâ€™s just middle age.

All systems are down the best years are all behind me.
All systems are down now I feel the whole world is mocking me.

Give us this day our daily bread, deliver us from all evil.
For now, and forever, amen. Thatâ€™s how the prayer goes.
Itâ€™s hard to find what matters the most, especially when thereâ€™s no time.
The years eventually catch up to us and bring it all to mind.

All systems are down the best years are all behind me.
All systems are down now I feel the whole world is mocking me.

Na-na-na-na-naâ€¦.

All systems are down now.
