Straws Pulled At Random

Meshuggah

What solace lies in the arms of fate The ill embrace of uncertainty When did I leave this in other hands To be pulled down at chanceRipped away by destiny-claws Am I another of fate's possessions Dwelling the lie of freedom Just another straw pulled at randomReclaimed by deceiving time A silent judgment I can not overruleDrawn back into the origin-vortex Uprooted and ground to dust Retracted into anti-existence A magnet repelled by life's polarityDenied the self control of fate We flow suspended in semi-life Until the ever imminent day When oblivion claims our breathNowhere indefinitely Not dead, not alive Existence-patterns ripped of symmetry As will and fate divideHave I appeared the gods of fate Am I allowed another day Must I die to escape The scanning eyes of death
