

White Bear

The Temperance Movement wasted in lies and secrets bearing colours for a fight that's not mine you love is all that I have I slip so sweetly into the corners where the sun never shines hiding my sunbeam underneath my coat and I never even saw it coming until I'd given myself away no matter where I go there's always something for killing the man in me high up on a haze but I'll be falling down on my hands and knees everywhere I go there's always something for killing the man in me high price for wisdom do you best until the best comes along our love is all that I am we smile so sleek it death wish rambles where the shadows are long finger my sunbeam like a dirty joke and I never even saw it coming until I'd given myself away

no matter where I go there's always something
for killing the man in me
high up on a haze but I'll be falling
down on my hands and knees
everywhere I go there's always something for killing the man in me white bears are marching in time to my eyes beat you say to empty my mind white bears are all I see unwanted, unwilling, untouchable, unworthy, undone and I never even saw it coming until I'd given myself away
no matter where I go there's always something
for killing the man in me
high up on a haze but I'll be falling
down on my hands and knees
everywhere I go there's always something
for killing the man in me

Lyrics provided by

<https://damnllyrics.com/>