Stars and Clouds

Stavesacre

Sunlight
Such a beautiful day to say
GoodbyeWe try to look our best thinking of you
How can I pretend when inside
None of this seems right, the timing isn't mine
There were things we needed to make rightWas so long, I never dreamed that I would see the end
That we wouldn't make amends, come short of reconciling
Still memories remind me he was so calm still and quiet
Precious and powerless but somehow strongHe carried on
Did he realize that you were gone?
I don't know, I see you in him
In voices, faces, expressionsAs long as I may stay
I will pray the same
To live a life like a child
And never to forget what I know loving isTo hear him speaking of you
He knew exactly what was happening
Said you were born today
His favorite person in the worldHe's different, a breeze of fresh air
Laced with a touch of somewhere familiar
He's tomorrow, he's starting over
He's treasure and survivalWalk the beach with him, talk the day away
And when the sun winds down
And the stars come out he could name one after you
As only a child could doPut you above, not behind him
Till the end, a bright place
Past the clouds and darkness, distance
