

In Your Room

K's Choice

As she falls down and hurts her head
She's lying still but she's not dead
Awakens slowly, sees a picture of herself
On the wall as she gets up
Straightens her dress and calls me up
She says, "I know now I am whole now, can you come?" In your room where both of you are talking
Your good side and your bad
Discussing who has better hair
In your space I hear four feet walking
And there's two more knocking
In case you're wondering, I'm still on your side As she embraces all of me
I want her only to need me
It doesn't matter what I tell her
'Cause she changes her mind before she speaks
And tends to talk before she thinks
But how I love her I know there's truth for you somewhere
If I were wise I'd take you there
But I'm not, at least not yet
So I'll be watching you instead
In your room, in your room
In your room we come In your room I can wander around forever
And I recognize the color of the walls that we painted
In your chair that I broke 'cause I was careless
I can sit and watch you dance around
My words are spoken, I am on your side
My words are spoken, I am on your side
In your room, in your room, in your room we come In your room, in your room, in your room
