

Grandpa Ran

Mike Goodson

Grandpa Ran

He was born in the summer of 1894
On the edge of a brand-new idea
But Kansas was just like a prison to him
The old ways felt unreal

Something just snapped inside his head
And he stole his dad's wagon one night
He drove the team hard, fueled by hate
And started his long west-bound flight

His dad told the sheriff, "You bring back my rig,
Don't care what you do with my son"
When the sheriff finally caught him later that night
He looked glad for what he had done

He had no remorse no feelings of guilt
He didn't even put up a fight
The kid lost everything on that sad joyride
He never went home that night

Grandpa ran, Grandpa ran
He ran into the darkness
I think he thought he was a man
Grandpa ran

He grew up with the circus one town at a time
All over the great Mountain West
He learned how to ride, rope, fight and cuss
Sawdust all over his vest

But all the road running just wore him down
And he yearned for a steadier ride
So, he jumped off the train near the Beartooth
Where found his Norwegian bride

They all soon found out he was the best cowboy there
"Howdy, Tex" is the name
But rodeo clowns couldn't make enough bread

To feed the family that came

So, he traded his guns for a Stillwater plow
And dry-farming for his love of "The Way"
But it didn't take long for the drought to return
And he knew he just couldn't stay

Grandpa ran, Grandpa ran
He ran into the darkness
I think he had him a plan
Grandpa ran

He moved off of the farm in the year of '33
To work as a factory hand
Leaving behind all that he loved the most
He horses, his pride and his land

But punching the clock was no kind of life
For this drifter, this wandering Clyde
So, he left once again -- seven kids and his love
In a shack on Billings south side

Grandpa ran, Grandpa ran
He ran into the darkness
No kind of plan
Grandpa ran

I wake up some times thinking of him
Thinking of all the things he'd done
I look in the mirror and wonder aloud
"Will I run?" "Will I run?"

They say that his trail is fainter from here
No one's really sure where he went
Some government work, maybe fought in the war
Faded postmarks from letters he'd sent

A brief meeting in the 50's with some of his boys
At the Shaffer's in Inkom, Idaho
All he could say was "I'm sorry my sons,
I just, I just had to go"

His final run came in the year in '65
Near Twin Falls on a dark lonely road
Asleep at the wheel or some kind attack

Finally lifted this poor cowboy's load

I saw him just once in a padded pine box
When my Grandma kissed him and said,
"No matter the tears, I still love him so
I'd do it all over again!"

Grandpa ran, Grandpa ran
He ran out of the darkness
I think he found out the plan
Grandpa Van
Grandpa Ran
He was born in the summer of 1894
On the edge of a brand-new idea
But Kansas was just like a prison to him
The old ways felt unreal

Something just snapped inside his head
And he stole his dad's wagon one night
He drove the team hard, fueled by hate
And started his long west-bound flight

His dad told the sheriff, "You bring back my rig,
Don't care what you do with my son"
When the sheriff finally caught him later that night
He looked glad for what he had done

He had no remorse no feelings of guilt
He didn't even put up a fight
The kid lost everything on that sad joyride
He never went home that night

Grandpa ran, Grandpa ran
He ran into the darkness
I think he thought he was a man
Grandpa ran

He grew up with the circus one town at a time
All over the great Mountain West
He learned how to ride, rope, fight and cuss
Sawdust all over his vest

But all the road running just wore him down
And he yearned for a steadier ride
So, he jumped off the train near the Beartooth

Where found his Norwegian bride

They all soon found out he was the best cowboy there
 "Howdy, Tex" is the name
But rodeo clowns couldn't make enough bread
 To feed the family that came

So, he traded his guns for a Stillwater plow
 And dry-farming for his love of "The Way"
But it didn't take long for the drought to return
 And he knew he just couldn't stay

Grandpa ran, Grandpa ran
 He ran into the darkness
 I think he had him a plan
 Grandpa ran

He moved off of the farm in the year of '33
 To work as a factory hand
Leaving behind all that he loved the most
 His horses, his pride and his land

But punching the clock was no kind of life
 For this drifter, this wandering Clyde
So, he left once again -- seven kids and his love
 In a shack on Billings south side

Grandpa ran, Grandpa ran
 He ran into the darkness
 No kind of plan
 Grandpa ran

I wake up some times thinking of him
 Thinking of all the things he'd done
I look in the mirror and wonder aloud
 "Will I run? Will I run?"

They say that his trail is fainter from here
 No one's really sure where he went
Some government work, maybe fought in the war
 Faded postmarks from letters he'd sent

A brief meeting in the 50's with some of his boys
 At the Shaffer's in Inkom, Idaho
All he could say was "I'm sorry my sons,

I just, I just had to goâ€”

His final run came in the year in '65
Near Twin Falls on a dark lonely road
Asleep at the wheel or some kind attack
Finally lifted this poor cowboy's load

I saw him just once in a padded pine box
When my Grandma kissed him and said,
"No matter the tears, I still love him so
I'd do it all over again"

Grandpa ran, Grandpa ran
He ran out of the darkness
I think he found out the plan
Grandpa Van
Grandpa Ran
He was born in the summer of 1894
On the edge of a brand-new idea
But Kansas was just like a prison to him
The old ways felt unreal

Something just snapped inside his head
And he stole his dad's wagon one night
He drove the team hard, fueled by hate
And started his long west-bound flight

His dad told the sheriff, "You bring back my rig,
Don't care what you do with my son"
When the sheriff finally caught him later that night
He looked glad for what he had done

He had no remorse no feelings of guilt
He didn't even put up a fight
The kid lost everything on that sad joyride
He never went home that night

Grandpa ran, Grandpa ran
He ran into the darkness
I think he thought he was a man
Grandpa ran

He grew up with the circus one town at a time
All over the great Mountain West
He learned how to ride, rope, fight and cuss

Sawdust all over his vest

But all the road running just wore him down
And he yearned for a steadier ride
So, he jumped off the train near the Beartooth
Where found his Norwegian bride

They all soon found out he was the best cowboy there
"Howdy, Tex" is the name
But rodeo clowns couldn't make enough bread
To feed the family that came

So, he traded his guns for a Stillwater plow
And dry-farming for his love of "The Way"
But it didn't take long for the drought to return
And he knew he just couldn't stay

Grandpa ran, Grandpa ran
He ran into the darkness
I think he had him a plan
Grandpa ran

He moved off of the farm in the year of '33
To work as a factory hand
Leaving behind all that he loved the most
He horses, his pride and his land

But punching the clock was no kind of life
For this drifter, this wandering Clyde
So, he left once again -- seven kids and his love
In a shack on Billings south side

Grandpa ran, Grandpa ran
He ran into the darkness
No kind of plan
Grandpa ran

I wake up some times thinking of him
Thinking of all the things he'd done
I look in the mirror and wonder aloud
"Will I run? Will I run?"

They say that his trail is fainter from here
No one's really sure where he went
Some government work, maybe fought in the war

Faded postmarks from letters heâ€™d sent

A brief meeting in the 50â€™s with some of his boys

At the Shafferâ€™s in Inkom, Idaho

All he could say was â€œIâ€™m sorry my sons,

I just, I just had to goâ€”â€•

His final run came in the year in â€˜65

Near Twin Falls on a dark lonely road

Asleep at the wheel or some kind attack

Finally lifted this poor cowboyâ€™s load

I saw him just once in a padded pine box

When my Grandma kissed him and said,

â€œNo matter the tears, I still love him so

Iâ€™d do it all over againâ€”â€•

Grandpa ran, Grandpa ran

He ran out of the darkness

I think he found out the plan

Grandpa Van

Lyrics Submitted by Michael Goodson

Lyrics provided by

<https://damnyrics.com/>