Hangover Heart

Hank Thompson

I've got a hangover heart from your kisses last night
My head is so heavy the tears blind my sight
You no longer love me, you said, we must part
And all I have left is a hangover heartToo much wine from the bottle makes you feel bad next day
But take another drink and that feeling goes away
But tell me, my darling, just how I should start
To take away the pain of this hangover heartNo pills from the doctor, no drugs from the store
Will help me forget the one I adore
I don't need a doctor, no nurse with her charms
All I need is you for my hangover heartI could go get more kisses from somebody new
But tell me, my darling, what good will it do
Come back to me, baby, let's make a new start
And take away the pain of this hangover heart
