

Dryad of the Woods

Pain of Salvation

Then came a girl
A dryad of the woods
With a sing over her door saying
If you enter
You must forgive me everything!
With a heart too big and brave
To let me dissappear
And still I hear
May I sleep at your feet?
And so she went over my fence
And reached out a hand
That I had to take
That I just had to take Love
Never let me
Lose that love
Never let me
Lose that love
Never let me
Lose that love
Never Sometimes, forgiving will
Just take you one step too far
And you find yourself on remedy lane Sometimes forgiving is too much
Like self abuse Sometimes forgiving leaves
Too much sear tissue behind Even if I could one day learn
To forgive you everything
Could I learn to forgive myself? Probably
I simply Didn't Understand
The full
Notion of
The world
Forgive
