

Abeyance

Black Veil Brides

As the candles yawned,
My world grew darker
'Til barely a detail remained Parchment and smoke
Through distant chimes
Moths carried by the breeze Her finger to my lips,
I am stilled in an instant -
I sip, and am numbed
From here the path winds backwards At first I see my entering
And then steps in reverse
Descent where I had fallen
Familiar, all is skewed
And yet I cannot reflect
Beyond my eyelids, I have died
Yet I collapse into youth Familiar, all is frayed
And yet I cannot abide
Beyond my eyelids, I have died Days are merging quickly now,
Into years that spiral from my chest
They pass but leave no mark I swallow forgotten words
To gain what was lost
And lost what was gained
Until neither is real
Behind my head, her hands hold no weight
I have reached a beginning,
But somehow I do not stop
I fall through the first moment
To find that there is more As light cascades
Through the hole my body has torn
Already, it is closing
End

Song Discussions is protected by U.S. Patent 9401941. Other patents pending.

Lyrics provided by

<https://damnllyrics.com/>