

Somewhere Else

Jill Barber

I used to look for you out in the daylight
I took highways and side streets and back lanes
                  Slept under open skies
                  Life could be cruel
Life could be sweet if I want it to be
                  This town that I once called home
                  I just can't hold on to
It's got strip malls and bus stops and people
                  I never really talk to
                  She said, ?Life could be sweet
But life is so cruel 'cause I let it be?
                  Everybody out here
They wanna live somewhere else

I wish I could find a place
                  And stay there by myself
Bit by bit I swear I think I'm losing
                  All this city's confidence
                  Everybody out here
They wanna live somewhere else
I wish I could find a place
                  Stay there by myself
Bit by bit I swear I think I'm losing
                  All this city's confidence
                  I swear I've lost
                  All this city's confidence
