

I Should Have Known

Windsor Davies & Don Estelle

I should have known I'd be alone again
On my own again, I should have known
Now I see things even the blind should see
Things someone with half a mind should see

The signs were there but I was too in love
Much too new in love to be aware
We flew too high at the start
Too high not to descend
It's no good to pretend
I should have known, my friend
You'd break my heart

I should have known I'd be alone again
On my own again, I should have known
Now I see things even the blind should see
Things someone with half a mind should see

The signs were there but I was too in love
Much too new in love to be aware
We flew too high at the start
Too high not to descend
It's no good to pretend
I should have known, my friend
You'd break my heart
