

48 Hours

Francis Dunnery

48 Hours ago I was sitting in my rocking chair
I'd been looking for something more and I had a feeling that it was right there
48 Hours ago I was lying in your loving arms
I'd been looking for another sign and I saw that little look in your eye
48 Hours ago I was happy in another time
Now I'm waiting for the operator on the phone line
48 Hours ago I was burning with desire
You laid down with your back on the floor and I set the whole of your dress on fire
48 Hours ago I was kissing you all over
I kept giving you a little sign and I kept giving you a piece of my mind
48 Hours ago I was happy in another time
Now I'm waiting for the operator on the phone line
48 Hours ago I was driving with the smell of your skin in the back of my car
And I knew I'd lost you to another dimension but I love you wherever you are 48 Hours ago I was driving to kiss you all over
I set the whole of your dress on fire
I met the whole of you 48 Hours ago
48 Hours to go and I'm thinking of your loving arms
I kept giving you a little sign and I kept giving you a piece of my mind
48 Hours to go and I'm happy in the present time
Now I'm talking to the operator on the phone line
