

The World as Broken

Evans Blue

You are the venomous
Empty brilliance
I am upset with, what I've become
I am defenseless, hardly broken
I am irrelevant with what I have done
What have I done? Etched in skin like scars I'm left with Swept beneath my sin
(Just to keep the surface from caving in)
Chased by the end of a book not written
Yet somehow I'm condemned
(Defeat the fire, or be the fire within) Take, TAKE
Or be the one who gave in
Break, BREAK
Or be the one who lives
Wait, WAIT
And leave the world as broken
To justify the end You're free to give in, but damned if you dare to Taught to forgive, while the hate lies within you
Feel trapped in your skin, you can't comprehend
He who preaches through silence, denies us our privilege Caged in glass
My chaos trapped
And wrapped inside my skin
Paint my past with cold dead hands
Convince me who I am Take, TAKE
Or be the one who gave in
Or be the one who lives
Wait, WAIT
And leave the world as broken
To justify the end You're free to give in but Damned if you dare to
Taught to forgive as the hate lies within you
Feel trapped in your skin
You can't comprehend
He who preaches through silence
Denies us our privilege Right to defend
Our doubts in regard to
Who we should be
When the answers involves you

The beat in my chest is
The absence I've turned to
Losing is closure if I'm who designed you
