

What the Hell Is Love

K's Choice

He was not so tall and rather fat
Had a Labrador and a limping cat
Born in a country with a broken heart
Had enough money and a credit card
Told bedtime stories to his teddy bear
Gave him lots of hugs and a dress to wear
Had a small apartment, what a lovely sight
He watched MTV all night Where the hell was friendship
He must have turned it off
And most of all he wondered, "What is love
What the hell is love?" He enjoyed the silence more and more
As he heard the door slam right next door
Had a fancy Parker and a diary
In which he wrote some poetry
And as he went to bed at night
The cat's eyes gave him ample light
To make him lie, awake and see
The content of his misery Where the hell was friendship
He must have turned it off
And most of all he wondered, "What is love
What the hell is love?"
