

St. Clare

Suzanne Vega

call on that saint
and the candle that burns
keeping her safe
until her return plaster and paint holding the fire
a poor woman's saint holding all man's desire bold little bird fly away home
could I but ride herd
on the wind and the foam all of the souls that curl by the fire
they never know
all man's desire watercress clings to the banks of the stream in the first grip of spring when the snow melts to green barefoot and cold and holding a lyre
by the side of the road holding all man's desire call on the saint when the white candle burns
until her return
