Oblivion

Genotype

I hear you, but I'm not afraid of you I'm not afraid of you Father, where is my gun? Now that the war has begun Oh, let me go it alone, I need no one I said I need no one But oh God, now here it comes And it's too dark to aim this gun Clicking now faster, faster, faster Once again I'm on the run And I hear you say, oh my stubborn son Don't you said you need no one But don't you see danger, danger, danger's Headed to oblivion? Followed the hunt far as I could Through dozen weathers, petrified wood And I took one shot in the dark And fired the bullet silver to heart And oh God, now here it comes And it's too dark to aim this gun Now faster, faster, faster Once again I'm on the run And I hear you say, oh my stubborn son I know that you said you need no one But don't you see danger, danger, danger Headed to oblivion? Oblivion, oblivion, oblivion, oblivion, oblivion This is the challenge

Wait a second, have you come so far for it to end like this?

I dare you to take a hold of that darkness from deep down in you Get back up, what are you so afraid of?

> Show your face, face to me Show your face, face to me Be you my friend or enemy Show your face, face to me

I do not fear oblivion, I do not fear oblivion Said I do not fear oblivion, oblivion, oblivion Father, where is my gun?

I need no one, I need no one

Said I need no one
