

Anna's Song

Walter the Orange Ocean cold day in new england soon my man will come home and these days i feel older care free days seem to have gone and i find me thinking of nothing but to wish you back to me i see a future that is far from this street my love spent summer learning how to build ships and id sit in the evenings dreaming of distant trips and when we first met i just though you were the plainest cloudy sky my love for you caught me completely by suprise I cant seem to get along with out you your face is always in my head the sun comes its a lonely kingdom without you you remember the things we said we said hold on well ive been holding on oh yeah in the future we will live in the country

find a chapter new and i could be free to be with you but that would be for you life in a prison this what i can tell your view ever changing always seeking something else and i find me thinking of nothing but to wish you back to me i see a future far from this street I cant seem to get along without you your face is always in my head
the sun comes its a lonely kingdom without you you remember the things we said we said hold on well i've been holding on I cant seem to get along without you your face is always in my head the sun comes and it a lonely kingdom without you
on
