

Wires and Waves

Rilo Kiley

There are twelve hours, there's a day between us
And you called to say you're sorry in your own way
There are oceans and waves and wires between us
And you called to say, you're getting olderAnd sometimes planes they smash up in the sky
And sometimes lonely hearts they just get lonelierHow did you survive all those fires and floods?
How did you survive your insufferable friends?
It was the plow that broke the western plains
And it's just my heart, gets rejected by my veinsAnd sometimes planes, they smash up in the sky
And sometimes lonely hearts, they just get lonelier and lonelier
And lonelier and lonelier and lonelier
And lonelier and lonelier and lonelierAnd sometimes planes, they smash up in the sky
And sometimes lonely hearts, they just get lonelier
