The Dead Zone

The Dead Zone

We sometimes stumble as we venture through this rubble, Acrid vapors have got me seeing double, feeling something that feels like nothing at all.

Searching for the face among the shadowed strangers she don't take prisoners when I find her Iâ€™m in danger, this compulsion grabs me as her body calls.

Every night I have the same cruel vision
I find the answers but Iâ€™m stayed by indecision Before I reach her the illusion fades

Itâ€™s been a while since the last time I could see her
In my memory will be burned every feature And I know I'll never forget her touch

Broken hearts lay scattered in amongst the wreckage some find the strength to see if any can be salvaged Most wander blindly, they search in vain

I sometimes wonder if this is all a dream so we tangle like phantoms in gasoline Two spirits are make the best of the night

This is life in the Dead Zone,
and I don't think that Iâ€™ll hardly survive
This is life in the Dead Zone
one look from her, one look from her I donâ€™t think Iâ€™ll survive
This is life in the Dead Zone,
and I don't think that Iâ€™ll hardly survive
This is life in the Dead Zone
