

Watermill

Stewart Dudley

Where the snow melts and the shadows bend
Weeping willows dance and the sea swells
At the river's end calling in the trance
And our eyes meet while the watermill
    Turns the stubborn stream
    And my life breaks on the waterwheel
    Into a dream
    When the light fades and the wind is still
    Hear the cricket's rhyme and the cascades
Of the river spill falling out of time
And our eyes meet while the watermill
    Turns the stubborn stream
    And my life breaks on the waterwheel
    Into a dream
    So the earth turns like a paddlewheel
    Secret still in spin and the sun burns
On a golden field where you've always been
And our eyes meet while the watermill
    Turns the stubborn stream
    And my life breaks on the waterwheel
    Into a dream
