Everyday Another Hair Turns Grey

Manfred Mann

In her house, happy she seems
But she's living on memories and dreams
How she dearly longs to recover
Her life when she was a young motherAnd every day another hair turns grey
Yes, every day another hair turns greyIn her house as mother and wife
She was leading an ordinary life
Now, she finds so much is missing
Gone is the love, the laughter and kissingAnd every day another hair turns grey
Yes, every day another hair turns greyHer children are all, all married now
She misses so the noise and row
That children makeIn her house she looks to the past
When first married, the loving was fast
And her husband, once a good lover
Now, he seems to be more like a brotherAnd every day another hair turns grey
Yes, every day another hair turns greyAnd every day another hair turns grey
Yes, every day another hair turns grey
Every day
