Another Try

M.B. Padfield

I still smell your cologne linger on my clothes
I still feel your arms pulling me in close Oh what a lonely heart beat to fall asleep to these cold sheets, no they don't hold me the same way that you doNo I don't know much, but what I know I could never ever let you go
And I know its rough sometimes to try to put up with me but I'm worth the fight
When my smile rests in the palm of your hands when my eyes hold onto you as long as they can
No we both aren't ready for goodbye so lets give us another tryLet's put a be before you say you're gonna leave
Oh the places we used to go still haunt me
Everything I can't apologize when the blame is on both sides
When you found you're new best friend, don't forget that I lost mineNo I don't know much, but what I know I could never ever let you go
And I know its rough sometimes to try to put up with me but I'm worth the fight
When my smile rests in the palm of your hands when my eyes hold onto you as long as they can
No we both aren't ready for goodbye so lets give us another tryOhh, I want to believe you were the same as you used to seem and the month before Mae when you were the superman of my dreams
And what happened to, the oh so likely prospect of me and you what was once a pedestal is now, just a floor falling throughNo I don't know much, but what I know I could never ever let you go
And I know its rough sometimes to try to put up with me but I'm worth the fight
When my smile rests in the palm of your hands when my eyes hold onto you as long as they can
No we both aren't ready for goodbye so lets give us another tryI still smell your cologne linger on my clothes
