Heavenly

Got A Girl

I hate the way you're looking at me
How is it that you're so unhappy
How is it when I look in your eyes
I can never see past the liesDo you know the difference anymore
Between the way things are and the way they were before
Still there's something you should know
Before you turn around to goThe way your smile makes me stay for a while
And your gentle touch brings back that all familiar rush
It's not how it used to be
That I still remember my baby
Can be heavenlyI hate the way you roll your eyes
When I ask if you will compromise
And I can always tell by you're face
You're sick and tired of the look on my faceDo you know the difference anymore
Between the way you are and the way you were before
But if it ends for good today
Hear what I'm trying hard to sayThe way your smile makes me stay for a while
And your gentle touch brings back that all familiar rush
It's not how it used to be
That I still remember my baby
Can be heavenlyI know it's hard to carry all that guilt with you
But know that I have reason to be guilty to
If I were to fall on my knees and pray for you to stay
Would it be OKThe way your smile makes me stay for a while
And your gentle touch brings back that all familiar rush
It's not how it used to be
That I still remember my baby
Can be heavenlyThe way your smile makes me stay for a while
And your gentle touch brings back that all familiar rush
It's not how it used to be
That I still remember my baby
Can be heavenly
