

No One Left

The Nightwatchman

Each one had a father.

There's no one left.

A name and a mother.

No one left. Each one had a dream, a prayer on their breath.

The world's gone black.

No one left. On the streets of Manhattan,

a dusty wind blows

letters and wishes,

a girl with a rose. On the streets of Baghdad,

a dusty wind blows

letters and wishes,

a girl with a rose. Each one had a father.

There's no one left.

A name and a mother.

No one left. Each one had a dream,

a prayer on their breath.

The world's gone black.

No one left. Fire and vengeance

in the New York sky above

stole my angel,

stole my true love. Fire and vengeance

in the Baghdad sky above

stole his angel,

stole his true love. Each one had a father.

There's no one left.

A name and a mother.

No one left. Each one had a dream,

a prayer on their breath.

The world's gone black.

No one left. I stand out on my front porch.

I look up at the sky.

Will my world go black

in the blink of an eye?

He stands out in the desert.

He looks up at the sky.

Will his world go black in the blink of an eye? Each one had a father.

A name and a mother.

No one left. Each one had a dream,
a prayer on their breath.
The world's gone black.
No one left. Each one had a wish.
Each one had a home.
Each one had a name,
a name and a rose.
