Dozen Dead Roses

Cody Riley

Sittin' at home all alone by myself at night. & I can't force it upon myself to have a good time. And I could've been anywhere but I just chose to drive on a hopeless mission to change your mind.

And there's a dozen dead roses in my passenger seat, ridin' shotgun with the wine you'll never drink, petals fallin' like the tears rollin' down my cheek. & your memory's sure startin' to sink like a dozen dead roses in my passenger seat.

Driving down this gravel road as fast as my truck will go, know for a small town girl you're sure hiding well, I past your house and all the lights were out, your car was gone. I know you're somewhere with him and I'm all alone.

And there's a dozen dead roses in my passenger seat, ridin' shotgun with the wine you'll never drink, petals fallin' like the tears rollin' down my cheek. & your memory's sure startin' to sink like a dozen dead roses in my passenger seat.

And I can't drive too far and I can't go fast enough to find out where you are.

And there's a dozen dead roses in my passenger seat, ridin' shotgun with the wine you'll never drink, petals fallin' like the tears rollin' down my cheek. & your memory's sure startin' to sink like a dozen dead roses in my passenger seat.
