How Strange

Damien Dempsey

I've seen the light of you come bursting, blasting through Yesterdays skeletons and cobwebbed glue
Your spirit burns so bright like fireworks, All Soul's Night
How you illuminate my shadowed sightYour humanity and your faithful loyalty
Your compassion and your plea for change
Gives me faith in humankind, all the good ones you can find
All the monsters and the blind, and strangeHow strange, how strange
How strange, how strangeThe sun lives in your smile but you've a storm so wild
For anyone who'd hurt a child for oil
The fat cats, parasites who stalk this world slave rights
The likes of you give them some sleepless nightsYour humanity and your faithful loyalty
Your compassion and your plea for change
Gives me faith in humankind, all the good ones you can find
All the monsters and the blind, and strangeHow strange, how strange
How strange, how strange
How strange
