Too Late

The Alan Parsons Project

When you were standing in the rain, I gave you shelter
When I was knocking on you door, you gave me none
Well, I don't make that kind of deal with anybody
And I won't be that kind of fool for anyoneHow do you feel when the tables have been turned?
What will you do now the bridges have been burned?'Cause it's too late now, the magic's lost
Too late now, the spell is broken
Too late now to count the cost
Of words that should remain unspokenWhen I need you by my side, you stand above me
And when I look into your eyes, you turn away
Well if that's the best there is then I won't buy it
Then if that's the only game then I won't playHow many danger signs did you ignore?
How many times have you heard it all before?'Cause it's too late now, the magic's lost
Too late now, the spell is broken
Too late now to count the cost
Of words that should remain unspoken'Cause it's too late now, the magic's lost
Too late now, the spell is broken
Too late now to count the cost
Of words that should remain unspokenToo late now, the magic's lost
Too late now, the spell is broken
Too late now to count the cost
Too late, it's just too late
