

Save Myself

Leann Rimes

I want the truth when the world is lying

I want to live or at least die trying

I want to share my soul 'cause it heals me every timeI want to scream when there's fear inside

I want to run when I gotta free ride

I want to shed my skin if I feel the urge to flyAnd I will fall on my face, too bruised and brokenAnd to save myself, I don't want to save myself

I just want to live out loud, feel the rush that's all around

I light the flames to feel the burn, trouble everywhere I turn

There's freedom in the lessons learned, and beauty when the love's returnedI want to breathe, like it's my first breath

I want to bleed, when I'm put to the test

I want to dig down deep, and find out who I amAnd I will love like a love lost, too scarred and too openTo save myself, I don't want to save myself

I just want to live out loud, feel the rush that's all around

I light the flames to feel the burn, trouble everywhere I turn

There's freedom in the lessons learned, and beauty when the love's returnedSave myself, I don't want to save myself

I just want to live out loud, feel the rush that's all around

There's freedom in the lessons learned, and beauty when the love's returnedYeah, when the love's returned
