Who Have You Been Loving

Bobby Long

When the world holds out its flag the sun will fall across the plain,
I will hold out my hands and take the blame
And when the weather falls too cold, the frost ravages the lanes,
I will bow down my head in shameBut who have you, who have you been loving,
But who have you, who have you been loving
But who have you, who have you been loving,
But who have you, who have you been lovingIf someone is unhurt then it's gonna be me,
But the tears that taint your heart you're so happy that you're free
If you're no better now than you've ever been,
You owe me an apologyBefore the dusk falls to dark ill have you banished from my mind, i just need a moments rest to make it mine,
Before the moment turn to cold with our last drawn line, beyond the rusted sin of gloat you had your time,But who have you, who have you been loving,
But who have you, who have you been loving
But who have you, who have you been loving,
But who have you, who have you been lovingIf someone is unhurt then it's gonna be me,
But the tears that taint your heart you're so happy that you're free
If you're no better now than you've ever been,
You owe me an apology
I said you owe me an apology
You owe me an apology

Lyrics provided by https://damnlyrics.com/