Untouchables

Bloodlet

Surrounded by the sorrow of infinite lost souls I hear the silent screams of lives that once were but are no more envelope in this threshold of pain all life knows haunted by images of joy I once knew but long since forgotten death surrounds me daily but I look through hardened eyes screams around every corner deaf ears to it cries I see the dismembered corpse humanity once was once I had a place but my piece no longer fits the puzzle no longer will I be persecuted for having ideals I'll walk the way of the alienated and the untouchables
