Break The Rules

Jeje GuitarAddict

Spent a long, long evening in a low down honky-tonk bar
Pulled a low down lady with a long black honky-tonk car
I asked no questions, I got no lies
A one off winner, I didn't want any ties and I knew it wasn't right
Well, everybody has to sometimes break the rulesTook me down on the highway, doing too many miles an hour
And by the way, she motored thought we might have made the Eiffel Tower
She stopped the motor by her own front door
I knew she'd done it so many times before but I was off of the floor
But everybody has to sometimes break the rulesI woke up next morning, feeling kind of up and down
Because I did not know if I was in or out of the town
Then I saw the face from the night before
Purse was empty, lying there on the floor but like I told you before
That everybody has to sometimes break the rulesI spend a low down evening, sitting high on a honky-tonk stool
And I spent my money like a low down honky-tonk fool
But everybody has to sometimes break the rules
Well, everybody has to sometimes break the rules
Yes, everybody has to sometimes break the rules

Lyrics provided by https://damnlyrics.com/