Crossing the Line

Stephen Michael Gibb

I can see the future in your dreams, what your seeing will come true, gunfire flying thru the night, no direction to this war don't give up the fight

Life's battles aren't always one by the masters of their fate, sometimes the underdog will win in the end, patience is your weapon that you will learn with time, beat your enemies fair without crossing the line

I can see the battle plans your making, you don't want to make the kill you just want to win the war, just when your thoughts are becoming twisted, you forgotten what you started fighting for

Did winning the battle take to long, was the price you paid worth it in the end, the world is big enough for everyone, can't you see your hate before your eyes

Lyrics Submitted by Stephen Michael Gibb

Lyrics provided by
https://damnlyrics.com/