

Song of the Magician

Tim Buckley

When I sing I can't bring everything on the wing
 Flying down from dizzy air
 To the ground because I care

You will be love and your love will live I smile, I beguile all the while every mile
 As I walk across the sky
 Of the clockwork, of your eye

You will be love and your love will live Casting spells from the well, I can tell you the bells
 Listen to my magic voice
 Learn the tune of children's toys

You will be love and your love will live When I die do not cry, hear my sigh passing by
 After I have turned to win
 I will try to help you then

You will be love and your love will live
