Unwritten

Whiteriver

Suspense eats up my perception
falling backwards in life

I stand in front of this crossroad with no idea which way to go If you tell life offers so many possibilities
I wonder why I stand in front of all these locked - up doors

One day I will find these keys
which'll set me free

Begging for a pleasure, countering waves of depressions a hand full of hope for my blackened heart

Suspense eats up my perception
falling backwards in life

Suspense eats up my perception
falling backwards in life

In life

With every heartbeat, every breath I'm afraid to die because I don't know who I am This little boy inside my chest told me to go on I am stronger than this

with every heartbeat, every breath I'm afraid to die
because I don't know who I am

The world spinning further should I take my path to discover the beauty of the earth the human being this journey over years

Lyrics Submitted by Andreyevich

Lyrics provided by https://damnlyrics.com/