

Down by the Singing Sea

Walter Martin

Fish are jumping
I guess they're huntin'
'cause every now and then they catch a fly or somethin'
down by the singing sea
sand crab's crawlin' over my shoulder the pretty lady over there's drinking Coca-Cola
down by the singing sea
while you're sleeping I float between the waves and the country music coming from some radio faraway
down by the singing sea,
down by the singing sea
sticks make a bridge that spans the ditch that protects the princess from the witch shells all fall from the castle wall see the water rise up and drown 'em all
down by the singing sea hey baby, won't you lay me down in the shade of that coconut tree 'cause I declare there's nowhere that a coconut would rather be than down by the singing sea,
down by the singing sea
down by the singing sea
down by the singing sea
down by the singing sea
down by the singing
down by the singing sea
down by the singing
down by the singing sea

Song Discussions is protected by U.S. Patent 9401941. Other patents pending.

Lyrics provided by

<https://damnllyrics.com/>