

"Mother, Did You Watch?"

Andrew Lloyd Webber

Mother, did you watch?
Everything is sold
Mother, can't you tell the new routine
It went so well? I was worried just a touch
That it might have been too much
Just a bit, well, rather, free But just listen to that crowd
Why, they've never been so loud
Screaming only for me Meg And the master must have heard
Every note and every word
Mother, tell me, did he see? Meg, stop it Even he will now concede
I'm the only he'll need Mother, what's wrong? Meg, sweet fool
You did all that you could
Shining bright
And yet still not enough Wh-what do you mean? How you danced
They're all entranced
Yes, all but the one
Whose entrancement we sought He wasn't there? Where, poor girl
Do you think that he was?
Yes, that's right
In with her all along With Christine? Claiming of their son they love
Too smitten to spare you
One moment of thought But you said All that you gave him
It's all been a waste You were wrong All that you've done
It has all been a waste Don't say that Now he has them
As for us we have
Both been replaced No
