Chocolate Girl

Deacon Blue

Alan doesn't understand her
He only thinks in numbers
He only drinks in restaurants
Where the girls are fully coveredAnd he can't trust his yearnings
And he doesn't like pretending
His tempers stretched so much by work
His heart needs gentle rendingHe calls her the Chocolate Girl
'Cause he thinks she melts when he touches her
She knows she's the Chocolate Girl
'Cause she's broken up and swallowed
And wrapped in bits of silverAlan doesn't understand this
He says, he's only human
So he still lights up with old flames
As if to try and prove itAnd he doesn't like emotion
(Emotion)
He's not certain of their odor
'Cause if pouting causes so much fun
Then breaking hearts is harderHe calls her the Chocolate Girl
'Cause he thinks she melts when he touches her
She knows she's the Chocolate Girl
'Cause she's broken up and swallowed
And wrapped in bits of silverAlan doesn't understand her
He thinks it's getting harder
So he spends the night with old friends
Underneath the coversAnd he talks about the Chocolate Girl
And how he thinks she melts when he touches her
And that she knows she's the Chocolate Girl
'Cause she's broken up and swallowed
And wrapped in bits of silverAnd he calls her the Chocolate Girl
'Cause he thinks she melts when he touches her
And she knows she's the Chocolate Girl
'Cause she's broken up and swallowed
And wrapped in bits of silver

Lyrics provided by https://damnlyrics.com/