Our Demons

Ages and Ages

Far off from that shady past
Ascending up those stairs
I finally heard a voice of reason
I had not heard in yearsDespite your efforts to convince me
That there wasn't nothing there
I finally faced my intuition
After allBut I remember waking up
And walking through that snow with you
My mind was almost static
In all that winter coldAnd for the sake of preservation
Well, I decided not to notice
That my interests played no part
In your designWe're not so different, you and I
You got your reasons for avoiding your demons
And I know I got mineSo watch out for those predators
They got fear inside their hearts
They're sure to strike you from a distance
And tear your flesh apartAnd then get angry
'Cause you're tracking all your blood across their floor
Well, we don't need those contradictions
AnymoreWe're not so different, you and I
You got your reasons for avoiding your demons
And I know I got mineWe're not so different, you and I
We're not so different, you and I
We're not so different, you and I
You got your reasons for avoiding your demons
And I know I got
