29

Drew Torres

Well I was floored when I heard. 2009, September 3rd, perturbed, by what had occurred. A half filled glass smashed into bits, just wasting days through crying fits, it's true. This life's so voided without you...

If you can hear me dear friend, please know. It's been the roughest time for us down here. If you can hear me dear friend, please know, that we've been shining through with optimism as you've taught us from the beginning.

There's gonna be plenty of, plenty of days of rain before we finally get over this. A little less guidance, a little less hope. The flame inside just flickering down to smoke. Sometimes it's hard to fill the void, of these paradoxical obstacles in this life we just can't deploy. Living through days, but never without your memory.

This situation's got me fearing comfort. Keep your comrades close, and your family closer. We don't need anymore disasters. Be not afraid to express the joy and the lack of pain another can create even if just for a frame of time.

Cuz it all passes by, like the dawning of the sunlight, or the flickering of this twilight.

Lyrics Submitted by Drew Torres

Lyrics provided by
https://damnlyrics.com/